The English people have been very much interested in the late movements of the French Republic, and it is not surprising that they have taken up arms in defence of their principles.
 They are now fighting for the rights of man, and for the cause of liberty.
 This is a noble and heroic struggle, and we all wish them success.
 We shall follow them wherever they go, and we shall stand by them to the end.
